

Get Involved

Trusts, Foundations and Corporations

Support from trusts, foundations and corporations enables us to make a difference to the lives of so many families with a sick or premature baby. Read on to discover the positive impact that collective support has on our community.

Case Study:

Turosi Giving's Meaningful Contribution to Life's Little Treasures Foundation's Website Redevelopment

Turosi Giving - a charity driven by a commitment to enhance the health & well-being of children - has been instrumental in supporting Life's Little Treasures Foundation (LLTF) throughout the creation of our new website. The positive impact of Turosi Giving's financial support extends far beyond the technical aspects of our website redevelopment - it truly resonates with families within LLTF's community as our website gives them access to essential information, support and connection opportunities, especially when parents find themselves in the hospital feeling confused, concerned and overwhelmed by the arrival of their sick or premature baby.

In addition to their generous financial support, the collaboration with Turosi Giving opens avenues for the Turosi team to get actively involved with LLTF through various volunteering and mentoring opportunities. This engagement not only fosters a deeper connection between our organisations but also raises awareness of LLTF's products and services among team members who might be going through (or know of someone going through) the life-changing experience of having a sick or premature baby.

Trusts and Foundations, like Turosi Giving, act as catalysts driving positive social change and this collaboration exemplifies the transformative impact that non-profit and corporate partnerships can have in making real and lasting differences to the lives of those who need it most.

Thinktank..

Case Study:

ThinkTank's Support for Life's Little Treasures Foundation and Our Community

ThinkTank - a leading property lending specialist - demonstrates corporate social responsibility through its giving program which has left a positive mark on Life's Little Treasures Foundation and our community. We are proud to be associated with an organisation committed to giving back to the causes important to their employees. Through their giving program, the company allocates $100 from every new loan settled to staff-nominated charities, resulting in a contribution exceeding $100,000 each year.

LLTF experienced the direct impact of ThinkTank's philanthropy when an employee, who was personally assisted by LLTF, nominated us to receive support. This thoughtful gesture not only reflects the interconnectedness of corporate giving and community assistance but also underscores the positive influence that corporations like ThinkTank can have on our community by helping us support families during what is often the most difficult and emotional time of their life.

This collaboration highlights the potential for meaningful change when corporations embed giving programs into their corporate social responsibility strategy. LLTF encourages other companies to follow ThinkTank's lead and asks those which already have giving programs to consider nominating LLTF. Through the power of the collective, we can amplify our impact and help even more families who require crucial support in hospital and when they finally take their sick or premature baby home.

It was one of the nurses who put me on to LLTF, and the extra support network it would provide. At a time when I felt quite helpless in how much I could do for our girls, they were a wonderful resource where I could gain confidence and hope through reading the stories of others with the same experience and learn about the little extra things I could do for the girls during this time.

When the opportunity came up via my employer to nominate a charity for us to donate to for the last two financial years, nominating LLTF was a no-brainer. Having come through our own experience with two premature babies and knowing many go through a far tougher time than we did, anything we could do to help LLTF provide other parents and families with some extra support was a great feeling."

Elsie, mum of twins (and their little sister)